1. Introduction and purpose

This statement is made pursuant to the UK's Modern Slavery Act 2015 and Australia's Modern Slavery Act 2018 having been agreed by the following (referred to collectively as "InfraRed") for the reporting period ending 31 December 2023:

- InfraRed Partners LLP
- InfraRed Capital Partners Ltd

For the purposes of reporting under the Australian Modern Slavery Act 2018:

- InfraRed Capital Partners Ltd is the only reporting entity covered by this statement;
- all references to "InfraRed" in this statement include InfraRed Capital Partners Ltd and the entities which it owns or controls.

InfraRed has a zero-tolerance approach to addressing modern slavery risks in its operations and value chain, which includes the adoption of relevant group-level policies and due diligence procedures, which are described below.

2. Business Overview

InfraRed is an international infrastructure investment manager, with offices in London, New York, Sydney and Seoul. Over the past 25 years, InfraRed has established itself as a highly successful developer and custodian of infrastructure assets that play a vital role in supporting communities. InfraRed manages US$14bn+ of equity capital¹ for investors around the globe, in listed and private funds across both income and capital gain strategies.

3. Policy

InfraRed is committed to achieving its strategic objectives by behaving responsibly and upholding high standards of business ethics as an employer, as an investor and as an international corporate citizen, including (i) detecting and preventing any form of modern slavery (including the following offences: slavery, servitude and forced or compulsory labour; and human trafficking) in its business and investment activities and supply chain, through the implementation and enforcement of appropriate systems and controls and (ii) ensuring transparency in its approach to inhibiting modern slavery in its business and throughout its supply chains. InfraRed carefully considers its actions and how others may be affected and ensures that InfraRed's values and ethics are integrated into its formal business policies, practices and action plans. There is also commitment to taking appropriate remedial action as necessary (see section 5).

InfraRed has been a signatory to the Principles for Responsible Investment (the "PRI") since 2011, which are widely recognised and regarded around the world.

InfraRed's Sustainability Policy outlines how sustainability considerations, including modern slavery, are incorporated into our investment and on-going management processes as well as the management of its own internal corporate operations, to ensure InfraRed's sustainability commitments are met.

¹ Data as at Q4 2023. Equity Capital is calculated using a 5-year average FX rate

InfraRed uses the guidance of frameworks such as the United Nations Global Compact (UNGC) to ensure that high standards of fundamental human rights are upheld. The UNGC's ten principles cover inter alia human rights, labour rights and the fight against corruption.²

4. Due diligence, risk assessment and risk mitigation

InfraRed undertakes annual reviews of its Global Policies, Code of Conduct, Employee Handbooks and Third-Party Risk Management Policy to ensure that they remain effective and appropriate for assessing and addressing modern slavery risks in respect of InfraRed staff and its supply chains. InfraRed undertakes periodic reviews of its investment processes to ensure that they remain effective and appropriate for assessing and addressing modern slavery risks. This review is informed by relevant industry guidance documents, peer discussion and where appropriate supported by specialist advisers. For example, in 2023, InfraRed contributed to a PRI working group which developed human rights due diligence guidance for private markets investors.

(a) InfraRed staff

InfraRed had 175 employees across 4 countries as of 31 December 2023. InfraRed continually reviews and monitors its employment practices to ensure they demonstrate principles of diversity, equity and inclusion. Regular communication across the business, together with the Global Policies, Code of Conduct and Employee Handbooks, ensure that InfraRed are taking steps to prevent slavery or human trafficking with respect to recruitment or ongoing employment of InfraRed permanent staff, temporary staff or contractors. Furthermore, no instances of slavery or human trafficking have ever been identified in respect of InfraRed staff.

(b) Investment portfolios

InfraRed manages an infrastructure investment portfolio on behalf of its investors. This portfolio includes schools, hospitals, solar and wind farms, power generation, battery storage, water and electricity transmission, transport infrastructure and communications infrastructure such as fibre networks and towers. The assets are predominately located in UK, Europe, North America and Australasia³.

The application of the UK's Modern Slavery Act 2015 and Australia's Modern Slavery Act 2018 and Minimum Safeguards is therefore most relevant to the supply chain associated with these infrastructure assets. InfraRed works collaboratively with the management teams of the various infrastructure assets (i.e. the portfolio company) and seeks to ensure that their suppliers share InfraRed's values around extinction of modern slavery and direct compliance with relevant legislation. However, it should be noted that InfraRed does not have day-to-day control over the appointment of the suppliers of these portfolio companies. InfraRed's process around modern slavery is reliant on the ongoing monitoring tools and due diligence responses received by InfraRed from the relevant portfolio companies.

Prior to investment InfraRed conducts due diligence of the portfolio companies to assess potential ESG exposures, including modern slavery and human trafficking, for new potential investments. InfraRed maintains an Exclusion Policy, a negative screening tool outlining activities that it will not support. These include activities pertinent to this Statement such as breaches of fundamental human rights and business ethics and compliance.

InfraRed's processes require an early assessment of any ESG 'red flags' before proceeding to the next stage of the investment process and conducting due diligence in respect of prospective acquisitions, using a form of checklist that includes a focus on labour conditions, and screening contractors and other key counterparties to detect negative publicity and any history of ESG issues. If concerns were to be identified during the initial screening phase of investment due diligence, considerations vary depending on the type of project, but may include:

- considering alternative suppliers;
- including contractual agreement for action to be taken in respect of supply chain participants in the event that there is a violation of codes of conduct;
- management assertions that there is no modern slavery within their wider supply chains;
- broadening the scope of due-diligence, including on-the-ground audit; and
- reviewing contractual arrangements to ensure that action can be taken against supply chain participants if they are found to be violating codes of conduct.

Further information on the investment processes can be found in InfraRed's Sustainability Policy.

As part of ongoing management, InfraRed's Asset Managers sit on the boards of portfolio companies and raise ESG issues at board meetings as appropriate. This includes ensuring that InfraRed's policy requirements, including policies governing sustainability, anti-bribery, cyber security, modern slavery, and health and safety are implemented and being maintained.

InfraRed believes that its suppliers should be working to ensure modern slavery does not occur. This includes InfraRed's suppliers' subcontractors, who may use temporary and agency employees. If InfraRed discovered that one of its suppliers was accepting of modern slavery in its business or supply chain, it would engage with the business to seek to remove such practices from their business and, if necessary, terminate its arrangement with that supplier at the earliest opportunity.

InfraRed undertakes an annual ESG survey of its projects to confirm that the relevant portfolio companies and direct subcontractors have a current modern slavery policy in place. This requirement applies to all jurisdictions. The annual ESG survey enables InfraRed to identify if there are any areas of non-compliance, in which case, InfraRed will engage with the portfolio company to rectify this position.

InfraRed's annual ESG survey also assesses whether these parties actively consider and implement processes to ensure that modern slavery requirements are addressed in a project's supply chain. For example, InfraRed encourages portfolio companies to train their staff on modern slavery requirements and utilise audit procedures to ensure that the requirements are being implemented effectively.

InfraRed remains committed to the prevention of modern slavery and upholding minimum safeguards and delivering the commitments set out in this document. It is acknowledged that there will be limitations to what can be achieved in practice. Through the annual ESG survey and stakeholder engagement, InfraRed aims to increase its visibility of policies and processes relating to modern slavery within its portfolio companies and their supply chains, noting that these do not form part of InfraRed's supply chain.

(c) Suppliers

InfraRed has a relatively straightforward supply chain model which is built around its core financial practice, maintaining its global offices, and supporting its technological infrastructure. The vast majority of spend in the year ended 31 December 2023 was with suppliers based in the United Kingdom and the United States.

InfraRed recently reviewed its supplier risk management process (both onboarding and ongoing management) and developed a Third Party Risk Management Policy which was approved by the InfraRed Board of Directors in December 2023. All new suppliers will be subject to an initial screening and risk assessment via the risk monitoring platform. Suppliers which have a critical or material risk rating will be required to complete a due diligence questionnaire and provide evidence of their practices and policies with respect to modern slavery.

5. Training, awareness, and grievance mechanisms

InfraRed operates a “no surprises” policy to encourage open disclosure of breaches of policy. Modern slavery is included in InfraRed’s definition of operational risk, meaning any material risk, near-miss events or actual incidents must be escalated and assessed in a structured way to a central risk management function. Remedial and preventative actions would be put in place and these actions would then be monitored and reported as part of the wider risk management framework.

InfraRed operates a Whistleblowing Policy where InfraRed staff are encouraged to report breaches of policy, malpractice or other concerns to the Whistleblowing Officer, the confidential external hotline or the CEO.

InfraRed also monitors that appropriate whistleblowing policies are in place for its portfolio companies and their direct subcontractors to enable individuals working on these projects to disclose on an anonymous or confidential basis any malpractices, including certain issues relating to modern slavery.
